ABOUT THE BEACON HOUSE

For over half a century, the team of experienced professionals at the Beacon House has been committed to helping every individual who walks through their door, understand and embrace the principles and tools needed to achieve lasting sobriety from alcohol and other drugs. As one of the first recovery facilities in the Western United States, the Beacon House knows what works best in building the foundation to achieve a lifetime of recovery.

From the first call, the Beacon House is truly dedicated to finding the right solution for each and every individual who reaches out for help. As a part of their “Integrity of Choice” policy, they believe in presenting treatment options that will help to achieve the best results, whether it is entering their facility or referring clients to another treatment center.

Their skilled staff follows custom-designed treatment programs that address the needs of their clients. The Beacon House strongly believes in treating the whole person, not just the symptoms of addiction. Identifying and treating the underlying issues, as well as the addiction itself, is critical to a successful and lasting recovery.
